NEVADA PIONEER GOES TO REWARD

Anthony Bruno, after many weeks of illness, died at the home of his son-in-law, Harry Lewis, at 6:30 o'clock Tuesday morning, says the Elv Times. Mr. Bruno had been suffering with heart trouble for over a year, but it was only six weeks ago that his condition became alarming.

In the passing of Anthony Bruno Nevada loses one of its most substantial and respected citizens. He was always keenly interested in any movement that tended toward enterprise and the upbuilding of the state. We were particularly identified with agricultural enterprises, and devoted many years of his life to ranching in this state. He had charge of the old Loring ranch at Currant Creek for several years, and from there he and his family moved to Sharp, Nevada, where he was postmaster and engaged in ranching. They lived there 12 years and then moved to Preston, where he continued his agricultural activities.

Mr. Bruno had lived in Nevada for 21 years and acquired that true Nevada spirit which made for him a host of friends.

He is survived by a wife and eight children, the names of whom are Mrs. Anna Irie of Delta, Utah; George Bruno, of Tonopah; Mrs. Harry Lewis, of Elv; Mrs. Adolph Walsh, Mrs. Emory Garrett, Mrs. Martha Cutler, Mrs. William Gates and Mrs. Ada Pawcett.

OWNERS MAY REMOVE BOOZE

RENO, Nev., Feb. 25.—Jonathan Payne, prohibition director for Nevada, was advised by the internal revenue department today of new regulations, predicated on a recent decision of the United States supreme court which permits persons to withdraw liquors from storage warehouses for consumption by the owner, or his family, or bona fide guests, providing such liquors are lawfully acquired and stored prior to January 19, 1920.

Owners of liquors so stored away from the home premises, however, must report within 30 days from February 17, 1921, to the federal prohibition director, a description of the liquor and the quantity thereof. This report only need be made in cases where the liquors are held for "storage" purposes in a place of storage other than the dwelling of the owner. No report covering liquors now held in the private dwelling of the owner is necessary.

The liquors cannot be removed from the place of storage by its owner or any other person without a permit regularly issued by the prohibition director. Any violation of this regulation will be regarded as prima facie evidence that the removal or removal is for an unlawful purpose and will render the department not permitted the removal from storage warehouses of beverage liquors under any circumstances.

(By Associated Press)
